XCEPTIONS"

eeep

Atten individually instrumented sheep were housed in small, elevated pens. This procedure is done to minimize the environmental stresses to the animal, and to provide reproducible results. The size of the pen permits the sheep to standup, laydown, or turn body positions.

Pigs

Six pregnant sows were housed in farrowing pens beginning one week prior to parturition. The sow is returned to routine housing after weaning of the piglets.

This procedure is done to prevent accidental injury to the piglets by the sow.
